SECTION A: (15 marks)
Answer all questions in this section

1. Read the passage below carefully then answer the questions that follow:

It was Saturday, the weather was cool. I was among the runners who were nervous. It was my first time to participate in such a famous event of the Olympic Games. Infact, it was my first time to be in Dar es Salaam, especially at the National Stadium.

The Stadium was full of spectators all over the country as well as outside Tanzania. There were other runners from Kenya, Uganda, Ethiopia, Seychelles, Malawi, Namibia, Morocco and many more. My heart was beating fast. I thought my fellow athletes could hear my heart beats. I was among the 15 Marathon runners representing their countries in this great race.

I came from one of the central regions in Tanzania called Singida, Kiomboi district. I managed to compete and succeed at all levels from district, region, zone and now I am representing my country Tanzania. Although I had met the minimum time set by the international Olympic committee, I knew that I could not do much more. However, in my heart, a voice told me that I can win. So, I did not give up.

The race started from the Airport to the National Stadium. The race was to cover fifty kilometers. An alarm to alert us was rang. We got ready, then, the gun was fired and we started the race. On the way to the National Stadium, there stood men with similar jackets as landmarks. Therefore, it was a matter of running, no worries of getting lost! Roads were cleared for runners.

At first we thought it was an easy task. Everyone ran very slowly. After about twenty minutes, everybody increased the speed. We passed by crowds of people who were waving and shouting at us. I could not hear my name. Beside the road I saw a bit sign board reading 40km. "Forty more to go" I said to myself, praying that God may help me to win the race.

Up to this point, I guess I was the 10th in the race. I felt very tired, my legs were aching, and my chest and throat were dry. I felt as if I was burning. I could not breathe properly. However, deep inside me, something encouraged me to keep on going. I started singing silently, "Kikuku keep on and on and on….." In a way, the song gave me a little more strength. I a moment, I thought blood would rush out of my ears and nostrils. Anyway, I moved forward and left some more runners behind. Another sign board read 20km. Ugh! I tried harder.

I was among the five marathon runners leading the race. I could read the names of their countries. They were from Kenya, Morocco, Namibia and Somalia. I knew I was the only Tanzanian; and others were now left a bit behind. I sign board read 10km. This was another pushy I got, that there remaining only 10km? I must do it.

Suddenly, Kenyan sprinter increased speed and started leaving us behind. He ran as fast as an antelope. The distance between him and me was now 100 meters or so. I made a quick decision that he should be my target. I remembered all the field exercises, climbing hills, crossing valleys etc. All of which I had done while preparing for this event in Singida and some practices in Manyara. I had developed a technique to help me feel at ease and increased my speed, even when I was tired. I had formulated a rhythm to go with my steps when running. I noticed the distance between the Kenyan athlete and me decreasing. A sign board on the road read 5km. "Only 5km to the end". I muttered.

On the road, the spectators were shouting with excitement; "Tanzanian! Tanzania! Tanzania! Don't let us down ….. we are at home, mind you?" "Keep on! Make it!" I decided to use a little strength I had left within as we entered stadium to finish the race. It was now a two-people affair. We were now about 100 meters from finishing point. The Kenyan was about 50 metres behind me. I rushed forward. "It is now or never". I muttered to myself.

The spectators on the terrace were now on their toes. They were shouting at the top of their voices. I closed my eyes, raised by arms high and dashed on. Then something touched my chest. It was finishing tape. When I opened my eyes, someone was holding my hand. "Congratulations Kikuku!

You have made it!" he said.

Behold!
The sun has risen,
And with it the sons of the land, have risen too.
Forward they go,
Well armed.
Singing praises to the beauty of the sunrise,
With the determination of long term warriours,
Challenging the enemy
With the courage of a free mind
And the vigour of a clear purpose.
Sit and wait brethren
Wait and see what glory they bring at sunset;
How they pay homage to their land.
And their people!
