3. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follows;

One of our responsibilities facing all of us today is how to preserve our environment. Environment is composed of earth's land and vegetation, water and air. In the past, most people never thought about the environment. They just assumed that there would always be unlimited of fresh air, clean water and places to dump garbage.

Now however, we are beginning to realize that fresh air, clean water and forest are precious. These natural resources also cross national boundaries. In other words, environmental protection is concerned not just of Tanzania but of citizen of every country in the world.

In the future as population expands more and more people will demand for environmental products, hence the earth's environment may be in danger. Water and air pollution is increasing and is harmful to living things as it causes air borne and water borne diseases, poor waste disposal is dangerous to the lives of land and aquatic creatures, improper use of chemicals from industries and mining sites has caused serious loss of thousands of biodiversity, and acidic rainfall resulting to drought.

Re-using products such as paper and water will probably continue to be seen as practical solution to environmental problems caused by garbage disposal. We also may refuse the habit of using certain products we like. Such as plastic bags and bottles, due to the negative effects of those products on the environment. Additionally we may reduce the use of some environmentally harmful products like petrol, charcoal and substitute them with gas. In this situation environmental education is necessary.

One of today's most serious challenges is how to conserve and restore the environment so that human beings can survive. This can succeed if we apply scientifically researched technology and practicable laws to answer the questions on environmental preservation.
