B)MAIN BODY.(2mark@)=12

- Reducing some costs of administration because it was cheap and more profitable by having interpreters tax collectors and other officials
- Helped to remove the problem of administrators because British population was very small while they have many colonies
- Helped to solve the language problem because African used their vernacular languages
- To reduce African resistance as it hide the real enemy to the ruled
- To reduce contradicting African traditional rules and customs through the use of local chiefs
- To serve the British racial regime because not many British were brought to the colonies like the case of French in assimilation policy
- It gave a chance to intensive exploitation due to close grassroots supervision like tax collection and forced labor.
- Extension of colonialism as it made British to rule their colonies for long time before people's awareness of decolonization.

C) CONCLUSION (1mark) a candidate may explain the effects of in direct rule to the colonized
