SECTION B {40 Marks}

Answer all questions in this section

3. Read the following passage and then answer the questions that follows.

Training on how to work together is a very important compound of teamwork. A team must know how to work together in order to be productive and successful. If a team can work together, it will be able to resolve issues that are standing in the way to accomplish a goal. Working together may not come easy at first, but with proper training and mutual communication the team will be able to adapt quickly.

When creating teamwork, it is important to have balanced skill sets. One way to achieve this is by having experts in different fields. If some members provide their theoretical skills, for example, individuals that are knowledgeable about the course materials are confused about the technology part of it. On the other hand individuals may feel that the technical side of the problem is more important than the theoretical side of it. By combining both types, the teams can come up with a solution that benefits everyone.

Allocation of roles within the team is one of the elements needed for team building. Assigning roles to team members helps them to know the team's place. Each member should be assigned a role that is clearly defined. This will facilitate easy decision-making and will ensure the completion of the tasks assigned within the required time.

Harmonizing personality is also one of the compounds of team building. The personality of someone plays a big role on how the team performs. The leader must understand the kind of people and personality they need to have in order to gain success from the team or group. For instance, someone who shows supportiveness is dedicated to the team's success and wants to aid the team; the person takes more responsibility, is very easy to work with and listens attentively to the ideas of other people.
